BIODIVERSITY DAY
We're part of the solution #ForNature

Aquatic Biodiversity, the variety of life in freshwater, tidal and marine ecosystems assume high significance to mankind by acting as sources of food, energy, atmospheric oxygen, buffers against new diseases, pests, and predators, and protection against food shortages and global climate change. State of Tripura in North-east India is a part of the Indo-Burma biodiversity hotspot, one of the 34 of its kind in the world. The aquatic ecosystems of the state harbour rich biodiversity at different hierarchical level including important finfish, shellfish, amphibians, reptiles and variety of aquatic flora. However, in spite of the role that the biodiversity plays in the state, many species are under threat, especially due to a number of anthropogenic factors such as loss and degradation of habitat, climate change, pollution, logging and poaching, invasive species, disease, loss of plant pollinators, and many more. While it is our privilege to sustainably utilise the precious bio-resources, there lies firm responsibility to conserve them for future.
